Steps

I went to a boarding school in Hong Kong. The school was built on a steep hill. There was only two ways to get to it; by car through a long winding road or by foot by walking up 296 steps. Every morning students, in groups of two or three, walked up those steps to attend school. Our track team, which won the championships year after year like the Charlestown High boy's basketball team, also used those steps for practice. At about 100 steps per minute, a well-conditioned athlete could run up those steps in less than three minutes. For most of us, however, those steps seemed to be such a big hurdle; it's usually a ten-minute trip.

Our yearbook, not surprisingly, was the called the Steps. Indeed, the cover was nothing but a picture of the steps, with the year printed next to them. When I left Hong Kong in 1962 to come to the United States, I took hardly anything with me. My 1962 yearbook was the exception. Flipping through those pages after more than 40 years, I can still recall moment after moment, faces after faces, and events after events. Few of the events were monumental, but because they were recorded in the yearbook, either in pictures or articles, they brought back fond memories. Most of my classmates and I have lost touch, even though I wonder what has become of them when I read those naive and pompous words so often recorded next to their pictures in the yearbook.

Most of us are common people. Few are destined to do great deeds. What we have accomplished in life is often nothing more than foot steps on yesterday's snow. The sun comes up, and the impressions are gone, melted away. Yet when we were making those impressions in the snow, they could look so beautiful, as if they would last forever. We want to remember them, those insignificant but precious moments: because someday the memories of them will bring joy to our life.

So now you have your yearbook. Treasure it. On some dreary rainy day, when you flip through the pages, these pictures and words will bring a smile to your face.
